Perspectives of Deontology in Ethics

Contributions by Norbert Anwander, Stephen Darwall, Jan Gertken, Stefan Gosepath, Brad Hooker, Thomas Schmidt, Jörg Schroth

Deontological views form a core group of ethical theories, yet there is considerable disagreement on what the concerns, issues and concepts that distinguish deontological thinking are, on how a deontological ethical theory should be conceived of, and on how deontology compares with alternative views. Hosted by the Institute of Philosophy of Humboldt University, the summer school will address these issues with the general aim of assessing the prospects of deontological views in ethics. It will comprise the discussion of talks and papers and provide plenty of opportunity for philosophical exchange.

The summer school will be addressed primarily, but not exclusively, to graduate students working on issues related to the topic of the school. Please apply by sending a CV and a one-page letter of motivation as a single pdf-document no later than 20 June 2008 to:
